Coaching Philosophy	I believe that young men learn through experience and the more touches they have on the ball, the more they will grow. At this age level, player development is crucial and will be a focus. Basic skills will be made solid, as well as a clear understanding of the game. From here, players will continue to develop skills and start working to understand the strategic side of play. In addition to learning the game of soccer, it is my goal to encourage strong character, leading the boys to be gentlemen.
